

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for implementing information transmission, computation, and especially 5 Internet server functionality by means of hardware modules are provided. Software implementing an Internet server is converted to hardware by using a merging circuit module that merges input packets from a plurality of circuits into one output. A designer is 10 free from a problem of complicated input/output timing control.